

Found in Translation - The Importance of Publishing and Translating International Youth Literature for American Readers

 Monday, October 3

 7:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m. (ET)

 Register:
bit.ly/MIColloquium-InternationalYouthLit

On Monday, October 3 at 7:00 p.m. (ET) our own Professor Marc Aronson will host a wide ranging conversation with renowned children's book publishers and longtime friends, Claudia Zoe Bedrick of Enchanted Lion Books and Angus Yuen-Killick of Red Comet Press on how they get books not written in English into the hands and hearts of young American readers.

This fascinating topic is for anyone interested in publishing and an ideal opportunity for public & school librarians to learn more about how to support readers

- who speak and read a variety of languages.
- have close contacts from around the world.
- prefer to read books born far from corporate marketing departments.

Angus and Claudia will read books in several languages and take questions about how to publish, translate, and circulate international youth literature.

HOST

Marc Aronson

Associate Professor of Professional Practice School of Communication & Information, Rutgers

FEATURED SPEAKER

Angus Yuen-Killick

Publisher, Red Comet Press

Angus Yuen-Killick is the publisher & visionary behind Red Comet Press, a Brooklyn based publisher of children's books. His passion for shepherding authors through the entire publishing process is evident when he says "can't think of anything more thrilling than launching little comets into the publishing world & guiding them into the hands of readers everywhere." (From WritersCast, April 21, 2021)

FEATURED SPEAKER

Claudia Zoe Bedrick

Publisher, Enchanted Lion

"Claudia Zoe Bedrick is the publisher, editor, and art director of Enchanted Lion Books, an award-winning, independent publisher based in Red Hook, Brooklyn. Her sense of hope is nourished every single day by the unfettered minds and creativity of children everywhere." (from EnchantedLion.com)

Are you interested in international youth literature AND love to travel? Did you know the SC&I LIS department offers a course on international youth literature every spring semester? This course, taught by SC&I Professor Marc Aronson, includes an optional trip to the Bologna Children's Bookfair in Bologna, Italy (March 6 - 9, 2023). For details, contact Marc Aronson at marc.aronson@rutgers.edu

Questions about Colloquium?
Contact connie.pascal@rutgers.edu

RUTGERS

School of Communication and Information

cominfo.rutgers.edu

@RutgersCommInfo

#RUSCI

#RutgersCommInfo